Warzecha to dream up "Oprah! A Comedy! Live Your Best Laugh" — a satire opening Thursday at the Annoyance Theatre. The farce, starring Michelle Renee Thompson as Oprah, will include more than 70 characters from both Oprah's world and the Chicago scene — including Steadman Graham, Gayle King, Mayor Daley, Dr. Phil, Rahm Emanuel, Suze Orman, Rachael

■ Former iO Theatre veteran Paul Brittain is doing his thing on "Saturday Night Live," and now another iO alum — Lauren Lapkus — has been cast on "Are Your There Vodka?," the sitcom based on comic and TV star Chelsea Handler's best-selling book. Laura Prepon has been tapped to play Handler on the proposed show.

TIMELY TOUR: Fans of Chicago history will want to know that Ken Price, the longtime PR director of the Palmer House Hilton — and the iconic hotel's resident historian — will launch special two-hour lunch/tour events, beginning March 1.

The price is $50, but trust me, the gourmet Lockwood restaurant luncheon plus Price's program will be well worth it. He has an encyclopedic memory of the hotel — and great tales to tell about the legion of celebrities who have stayed at the Palmer House over the years.

ON THE LIST? We've already heard about Sarah, Duchess of York, being snubbed — not being among the 1,900 privileged folks on the guest list for Prince William and Kate Middleton's April 29 nuptials.

But there's more: There's actually an "A," "B" and "C" list — even for that lucky 1,900 invited to the Westminster Abbey ceremony.

That group gets whittled down, with only 600 guests making the cut for the reception immediately after the ceremony. The true inner circle of 300 will then be included in the sit-down dinner that night at Buckingham Palace, hosted by Prince Charles.

SEEN ON THE SCENE: It was a media melee at Di Sotto Enoteca the other night as NBC's Kim Vatis, Fox's Anna Davlantes, WGN's Nancy Loo and Sun-Times columnist Dr. Laura Berman got together to toast Vatis' birthday. ... ## Berlusconi chippie elbows Bo aside

VIENNA — A quirky construction mogul won't be taking American actress Bo Derek to Vienna's famous Opera Ball after all, and her replacement may be the teenager embroiled in a sex scandal surrounding Italian premier Silvio Berlusconi.

Richard Lugner, 78, invites a different celebrity for the gala every year. Recent dates have announced last week that Derek, 54, best known for her sexy role in "10" (1979), would be next.

But he canceled his contract with Derek because she wanted $25,000 more than he originally agreed to pay her to be his date.

Lugner has almost completed negotiations with Karima el-Mahroug, at the center of a prostitution scandal.
